THE rumour to which the Hochi Shimbun gives currency to the effect that Russia has raised some questions about the Island of China not generally known, junks were to be iron spike, a bamboo, two iron rolls, and two Yezo, though very vague, may not be without some foundation in fact. It is said that Mr. Kuropa has burried off to Vladivostock in my equalimity, when down upon my devoted head magistrate now ordered him to find two sureties consequence, and if this be true it would appear that the matter was one of immediate the centlemen who recently waited upon him to charged for want of evidence. importance. It is difficult to imagine what thank him for what he had done towards the laim Russia can have to make with regard to Yezo. She managed to wrest Southern than pause to remark that a very long list of Sagbalien from Japan under the pretence of an exchange of territory, and if she could obtain Yezo on some equally lame plea by the modern Hercules whom it is our good if he had been an "Old Cricketer" would have would not hesitate a moment to annex it: -Russian territory is separated from Yezo only by the narrow Straits of La Perouse, and the island would be a rich prize well worth going to some trouble to secure. A QUESTION

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." SIR,—May I be permitted to ask through the medium of your columns what is the reason of keepers exactly at the end of the month as has been the rule until lately. Not to receive pay until a few days after it is due may not affect the higher officials whose stipend is large, but it is a hard measure to a poor keeper.—Yours. &c.

THE GRAVES OF OCEAN IN MEMORIAM THE "EURYDICE," MARCH, 24TH, 1871

Deep down beneath the anresting surgo There is a penceful tomb; Storm raves above, calm reigns below: Safe, safe from the ocean's wreak and wee. Safe from its tide's uncensing flow, The weary find a home.

Calm shelter from Time's voxing winds : Sure anchorage at last ! The blinding sea drift blinds not here; No breakers' boom the sleepers fear, . No angry typheon hovers near; Their latest storm is past.

Who dies in Christ the Lord, dies, well Though on the lonely main : As soft the pillow of the deep, As trancuil to uncurtained alcop. As on the couch where fond ones weep; And they shall rise again.

Not safer on the sea of glass Before the throne of God! As sacred is that occan-cave, Where weeds instead of myrtles wave As near to God that unknown grave, As the dear churchyard's sod.

When the cold billow covered then No solemn prayer was said! Yet not the less their crown shall be In that great morn of victory, When from their mortal fetters free; They leave their peaceful bed.

What though to speak the words of love No dear ones then could come, Without a name upon their bier, A brother's or a sister's tear. Their heaven will be as bright and near As from their boyhood's home-

Star of the promised morning, rise! Star of the throbbing wave, Ascend! and o'er the sable brine With resurrection splendour shine; Burst through the clouds with beams Divine. Mighty to shine and save. HORATIUS BONAB, D.D.

FIJI BEFORE ANNEXATION BY HAMILTON D. GUNDRY, AUTHOR OF " CHIPS FROM A ROUGH LOG." ETC. (Concluded.)

The youngest son, and cortainly the king's favourité, Ratu Joseph was sent to a college at Sydney, New South Wales, from whence he returned much improved and quite in European style, speaking English remarkably fluently. The Queen Adi Lidiana was a fine old lady of immense proportions, in fact she was so given over to embonpoint that it was with the greatest difficulty she could get about. I used often to visit her in her "Buri" (a small house adjoining the large one) where she used mostly to sit during the day, and where she slept at night. Two or three women were always in attendance upon her. Directly. I seated myself in this little "boudoir" she would send off an attendant for some delicacy his days; may he reach a good old age:

and morning. On the Island of Nairai mat making is industriously pursued, and I have taken from that Island 600 mate as a present to the King from the natives; these mats are beautifully plaited, and are cool and pleasant to lie on in a hot climate. The Fijians in their own towns are very industrious, but they do not care about working for the white man unless they particularly want money or trade. The young men are fond of games and I have spent hours watching them. On wet days in the houses they play a game something on the quoit principle; mats are spread the whole length of the house and the tops of cocoanuts are employed; the art of the game is to pitch the quoit from one end of the house to the other end and get it as near the end of the mat as possible, the opponent aiming to knock it off and obtain its place with his shell. In out-door games they may be seen throwing stones from behind their backs at at anything perched up; at this they are very expert. Another favourite amusement is to collect a quantity of lemons and at about 30 yards off keep throwing at each other alternately, and they are unpleasantly true in their aim. On moonlight nights Fijians are very restless, seldom'going to bed; preferring to wander about till the moon goes down! I have often been + A large nagget called by this name had been a swakened by some fellow prowling about on short time previously found in New South Walson.

NATIVE BURIALS. When a native dies, he is sewn up in a South West end of Vanua Levu. I have known natives afraid to cross the path leading to this place when any of their friends died, fearing that they might encounter the spirit en route. In Levuka there were two chiefs who were prisoners of war, both old men; for years they had been mortal enemies, and only became friendly to join their forces against the King; one of these died, and was sewn up in his mat; the other was accidentally selected to bear his ancient enemy's remains to the burying ground. I saw his trotting along, looking very much as if a more revolting duty could scarcely have been imposed upon him, and as if he was in a great hurry to get rid of his load. The whites' burial ground was once in the town Levuka, but now they have wisely laid out a cemetry about two miles down the coast which is generally reached by boats. Each denomination has its separate ground.
